

Intentions

The property will be multi-purpose and serve as a Meditation Centre, Library and Buddhist Studies Centre and a designated residence for monastic teachers.

---

Meditation Centre

The Meditation Centre (646 square feet) will include a meditation hall that can comfortably seat 35 yogis and the teacher. Regular classes will be held each week with day-retreats being conducted on weekends.

---

Library and Centre for Buddhist Studies

The library will consist of a comprehensive collection of Buddhist books from all sects of Buddhism including the complete collection of Tripitaka in as well as Mahayana, Vajrayana, and Zen texts in English.

The Library and Centre for Buddhist Studies is intended to offer a forum with resources where diverse people can participate and share their beliefs and ideas without any prejudice or discrimination. This will create religious harmony and cultural unity. This new concept of Library and Buddhist Studies Centre intends to fill a much needed void in the society,

The programs and activities will be non-sectarian and intended to develop multi-ethnic and religious tolerance for all so that they may come to a common purpose of introspection and understanding. Access to the Centre includes meditators and non-meditators for whom there will be programs and activities related to Dhamma Studies. The library will be open and accessible to members of the public.

---

Monastic Residence

One section of the property will serve as the residence for the Centre monastic teachers. The monks will reside in the Centre and observe their rules and practices with emphasis to renunciation and solitude.